

I think that kids should be able to buy junk food because kids should be able to spend the way they want to. Kids should have a store bought candy bar or a cupcake with their own money if they want to spend the money they earned from chores or their birthday. "If children have been denied something they want it more".

Kids also need to control themselves. People often point out that adults usually buy the junk food. To also go with that some say banning kids not to buy junk food will do nothing and not encourage kids to eat healthy. Adults should also not hover over their kids and let them make choices of their own so they can learn things for themselves but adults can encourage their kids to eat healthy.

It could also lead to behavior problems for kids. Some kids will go crazy and will not be happy and will not want to listen to each other and will have a hard time and will not want to do much of anything. "We have to teach kids how to think, not what to think". I think that kids should be in control of their choices and help themselves. That is why I think kids should be able to buy junk food.
